

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a voltage stabilization system for power supply lines, comprising a variable inductance, an autotransformer and a system for controlling the variable inductance to automatically compensating for voltage variations of the power supply lines. The system can include a control system that includes a processor unit, a 5 setpoint adjustment unit, a feedback unit and a rectifier circuit.